ON THE COVER

Blazing from Washington to New York at speeds over 100mph, the Metroliner introduced America to high-speed rail, writing a unique chapter in railroad history. Now arriving and ready for operation or display, WalthersProto Metroliners are breaking new ground in HO Scale too! For a closer look at these amazing replicas and complete information, turn to page 13.

SAVE A TREE – GO PAPERLESS!

Are flyers and catalogs filling up your mailbox? Walthers Flyer is available online at walthers.com for convenient browsing or downloading. ## WELCOME

Bring the romance of the rails to your layout this month with exciting new products and great deals at prices you'll love, all in this issue of Walthers Flyer.

All Aboard for Walthers Passenger Sale, ready for boarding now on page 14! A great way to upgrade service along your line, check out the great selection of cars and accessories at great savings.

Don't trust those groundhogs — with the all-new WalthersProto Russell Snow Plow your HO railroad will be ready for winter's worst! Completely new from roof to rails and packed with features, see the complete selection (including an undecorated kit version) on page 4 for the first time in this issue.

Keep liquids moving on layouts old or new with the latest WalthersProto Tank Cars in HO. See the newest roadnames for the classic Type 21 8000-gallon cars and UTLX 16000-gallon Funnel Flow® models starting on page 5.

Take on big bulk hauling jobs with new WalthersProto versions of the Difco® Dump Car and a new run of 53' Thrall Gondolas. Complete details start on page 5.

Big and colorful, more roadnames are rolling your way with WalthersProto Thrall All-Door Boxcars. Check out the latest limited-runs on pages 5 & 6.

Detail modern urban areas with the new Cornerstone® 24-Seven Quick Mart convenience store (pictured below), or expand an industry with the Small Brick Office Building. Complete details on our newest HO kits can be found on page 7.

Find out more about these new models at walthers.com, by calling us at 1-800-487-2467, or visit your participating hobby shop to reserve any new product in this issue.

Happy Modeling!

Conrail's Rainbow Era

The winter of 1977 was a long cold season for railroads in the northeast, but great times were just beginning. That flashy coat of Conrail blue paint on a former Penn Central GE U30B leading weary diesels from two predecessor lines was a boon for train enthusiasts. For the next ten years colorful mixed lash-ups were the rule as the new Conrail blended the motive power fleets of its component railroads. This Buffalo bound manifest freight includes a grimy Erie Lackawanna SD45 and a Reading GP30 leading a former PC Evans boxcar, coil car and an insulated boxcar.

One lucky photographer snaps a photo of the flashy blue unit from the parking lot of the Quick Mart. Typical of many small towns that grew up along the tracks, this hamlet built streets on both sides of the tracks with storefronts facing the mainline.

It's easy to add colorful 1970s and 80s trains and scenes to your layout. See the new Quick Mart on page x and find more rolling stock and structures in this Flyer and at walthers.com.

A Note on Availability

At Walthers, we strive to provide you with the widest variety of product possible. In order to achieve this goal, we maintain significant inventory on site. Despite our best efforts to have every item you could possibly need in house at all times, it is not realistically possible to do so. For your convenience, we do our best to promote items that are in stock and to clearly label other items— those that are new and available for Advance Reservations or items that are low in stock and have Limited Quantities Available when the Flyer goes to press. At times, we experience a quick sell out on a particular item or unexpected demand for an item that we believed to have sufficient stock in house. In many cases, items can be back ordered for future delivery. In other cases, we are unable to secure more of a particular item. For the most up to date availability information, we encourage you to check walthers.com, email us at custserv@walthers.com or call our Customer Service Team at 1-800-4-TRAINS. The 'Find It' feature on our website will help you find a Dealer in your area that may still have stock available for the item you desire. Please know that we appreciate your support of both Walthers and your Local Hobby Shop. We are committed to making this Flyer a valuable part of your model railroading.

Primary Assignment: High-speed passenger service on Northeast Corridor between New York and Washington.

In Service: 1969-82; one preserved Snack Bar Coach.

Developed for the Northeast Corridor (NEC) by the Pennsylvania Railroad, Budd, Westinghouse and General Electric, the Metroliner introduced America to high-speed rail service. Entering scheduled service early in 1969 with Penn Central, the new electric multiple-unit (EMU) cars were patterned after contemporary airliners, and offered similar amenities. A typical six-car train included four Coaches, a Snack Bar Coach and a Parlor, and regularly operated at speeds over 100mph, a considerable accomplishment at the time. After 1971, Metroliners became a bright spot in Amtrak operations, handling millions of riders between Washington and New York. By 1982, and after years of hard service, the Metroliners had run their last miles on the NEC and under their own power. Keeping their overhead pantographs to power lighting, heating and air conditioning systems, they were reassigned as standard cars on trains between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, until finally being withdrawn in 1995. Snack Bar Coach #860 is preserved at the Railroad Museum of Pennsylvania.

PASSENGER STOP

A Whole Train in a Single Car

As passenger counts dropped thanks to auto competition, railroads cut costs on secondary and branch line runs using self-propelled passenger cars called "Doodlebugs" in place of locomotive-hauled trains. The gas-electric cars were usually equipped with a Railway Post Office section (the money-making part of the car), a baggage/express section and a few coach seats. By the late 1940s, Budd took notice and introduced the Rail Diesel Car, or RDC, to replace commuter and medium-distance runs with classier streamlined equipment. In 2013, VIA Rail Canada and the Alaska Railroad still use RDCs on intercity runs between several city pairs.

PASSENGER STOP

Get Me to the Depot On Time!

At large stations, passenger platforms were usually not near the coach yard or engine facility. Switchers moved trains between the platforms and the yards. In the steam era, 0-6-0s and 0-8-0s were common. In the diesel era various switchers, such as EMD SW1s and other SWs, GE 44-tonners and Alco RS and S series switchers handled the job. As train time approached, the switch crew would round up passenger cars, express cars and road power and place the entire built-up consist at the proper platform track.

Guaranteed Connections

Some railroads' passenger trains reached their endpoints over the rails of connecting railroads. GN's flagship Empire Builder and NP's North Coast Limited between Chicago and Portland/Seattle used affiliated railroads CB&Q and SP&S to reach Chicago and Portland, respectively. Union Pacific City streamliners reached Chicago over connecting roads CNW/MILW; Kansas City via Wabash and San Francisco/Oakland over SP. Seaboard Air Line's Miami-New York Silver Meteor reached the Big Apple over the Pennsy. IC's City of Miami reached Florida via the Central of Georgia and ACL. Many more of these cooperative runs operated across the continent.

PASSENGER STOP

Keep Going or Stop

Passenger station track arrangements generally come in two variations. Through stations allow trains to pause, load passengers, and continue on. Stub-end terminals, often found in large cities, were usually the starting or end point for passenger runs. Often accessed from one leg of a wye, trackage radiated out from the platforms in several directions. But no tracks allowed trains to progress through the facility without a backup move to the mainline. Some stub stations, such as Chicago Union Station, have a few through tracks which may have been later additions as ownership and train operations warranted through service.

Pooled RDCs?

Did you know that there was a pooled RDC operation? The Boston & Maine and Canadian Pacific teamed up to offer the Boston-Montreal Alouette using RDCs from 1956-1965. Both contributed RDCs and trains operated with one car from each railroad. Equipment included RDC-2s rebuilt with a lunch counter for meal service.

We Won't Go!

There were a few railroad holdouts who didn't join Amtrak in 1971 for various reasons. Non-participants were required to maintain existing service for five years. Georgia Railroad maintained mixed trains as required by its state charter. Rock Island determined keeping its Peoria and Quad Cities Rockets was cheaper than joining Amtrak. Southern Railway gave some service to Amtrak, but continued its Southern Crescent until Amtrak in 1979. Rio Grande continued the Rio Grande Zephyr until 1983, making it the last U.S. non-Amtrak long distance carrier. Amtrak operates the train today. Non-joiners Reading/Conrail and Chicago, South Shore & South Bend were mostly suburban operations which were later absorbed by local commuter authorities.

What's on the Platforms?

Aside from passengers, platforms may be teeming with other details depending on the locale. Up through the 1960s, big terminal platform areas had everything from hot dog wagons and shoe shine chairs to newsstands. Other details include clocks, benches, advertising signs, information boards, track number signs, red cap stands, platform lights, baggage wagons, mail wagons, and tractors. Along the tracks, racks for MU cables, spare steam hoses, steam or electrical connections, cords, blue flag racks and more occupied space along the ballast. In contrast, smaller stations along the line might only have a single baggage wagon, a train order signal, a mail hook, a newspaper machine and a bench or two.

Amtrak's First All-New Cars

Amtrak inherited a ragtag fleet of mostly 1950s-built passenger equipment at its startup in April 1971. It desperately needed to upgrade its fleet with new, reliable equipment. Amtrak placed an order with Budd for cars based on the popular Metroliner electric MU cars which was delivered between August 1975 and 1978. The fleet of standardized cars, dubbed Amfleet, included over 400 coaches and over 85 food service cars. They were very successful, and another 125 revised Amfleet II coaches and 25 lounges arrived beginning in 1981. The second batches featured larger windows and mechanical upgrades. These cars have proven durable and most remain in service today.

Mixed Trains

When railroads decided to cut costs on lines that handled passengers and freight, they sometimes combined both trains into a single run. Trains usually carried a combine for less-than-carload freight and mail ahead of the caboose. After the Post Office canceled mail contracts, many mixed trains were discontinued. Most mixed trains were long gone by 1970, but a few lingered after Amtrak. In Canada, some remained until the late 1970s, and Ontario Northland continues to run its Polar Bear Express in 2014.

PASSENGER STOP

Extending Amtrak's Reach

Amtrak's station code GVI for Grangeville, Idaho, a town formerly served by a Camas Prairie RR branch line that last saw passenger service in the 1960s, is an example of how Amtrak has extended its reach using connecting buses. Amtrak serves Grangeville with an Amtrak Thruway bus connection to the Empire Builder at Spokane, Washington. Bus feeders account for a significant number of passengers on many trains across the continent. Modern motor coaches, some dressed in attractive Amtrak schemes, are regular visitors to Amtrak and bus stations.

Private Cars

Since the early days of railroads there have been privately owned passenger cars, and special cars for railroad company executives. Usually handled on the rear end of the train, owners pay for special handling. In its early years Amtrak required cars wear its color scheme, but rescinded the requirement by the late 1970s. Today, Amtrak still handles private cars and railroad-owned executive cars, many of which are dressed in a wide variety of historic railroad schemes or their owner's unique colors. VIA Rail Canada allows private cars only on some of its trains, and specifically excludes any train with a dome (Park) car on the rear.

Why Bi-Levels?

Developed in the 1950s, Santa Fe Hi-Level and Chicago & North Western's bi-level commuter coaches, or gallery cars, set the pattern for many to follow. But why? On ATSF, Hi-Levels had 68 or 72 reclining seats on the upper level, instead of the usual 44 to 56 on a single-level car, relegating mechanical equipment and restrooms to the lower level. Commuter gallery cars could handle upwards of 130 people on two levels, including standees. Each train required fewer cars, hence fewer diesels, smaller crews and less maintenance, so the cost savings was significant.

WALTHERSPROTO FASTFACTS™

Introduced in 1961, the GP30 was possibly the most distinctive diesel ever built in large numbers. Although longer and wider than previous EMD designs, a slight bulge was needed in the long hood just behind the cab to accommodate air handling and electrical equipment. Influenced by GM's auto styling staff, the bulge was covered with a rounded metal fairing that extended back to the middle of the long hood and to the front edge of the cab roof. The appearance of the new locos could also be changed by customer specifications and some opted to use refurbished parts from retired engines. Although replaced by the new 35 Line in 1963, GP30s led long, productive lives in mainline service, and a few remain in revenue service on shortlines today.

WALTHERSPROTO FASTFACTS™

Designed for branch lines, EMD's "Special Duty" series debuted in 1952 with the SD7, featuring the new three-axle Flexi-Coil truck with its powered center axle. EMD's new truck not only spread the weight, but the extra traction motors provided more starting power. Responding to demand for a more powerful version, EMD replaced the SD7 with the SD9 in 1954, equipped with the new 567C prime mover that delivered 1,750 horsepower. Except for placement of the class lights, the SD9 looked almost the same as the SD7. By the time production ended in 1959, 515 SD9s were in service on over a dozen railroads. Some are still going strong after 50+ years of service!

MAKING RAILROAD HISTORY
WALTHERSPROTO

Workin' on the Railroad

On your layout, the American crane is a natural addition to your railroad's yard scene, scrapyards and steel mill scenes (where you can use them as switchers too) and along the line in construction or maintenance scenes.

The World's Greatest Hobby is on Tour!

Looking for a fun and exciting adventure? You'll find it at a World's Greatest Hobby Show. There's lots to do and discover at every show. Get inspiration for your own layout from operating model railroads on display. Share your children's joy as they ride a giant train and play with toy trains. Learn new techniques at a demonstration or seminar. And, get a first hand look at the newest products on the market.

From all the skills you learn to the fun you have, it's easy to see why model railroading is the World's Greatest Hobby.

2014 Show Schedule

January 18 & 19

Philadelphia, PA - Greater Philadelphia Expo Center

February 22 & 23

Novi, MI - Suburban Collection Showplace

Walthers is a proud sponsor of the World's Greatest Hobby. Be sure to stop at Walthers booth to learn more about model railroading and to say hello. Get more show details at wghshow.com

The Complete Passenger Train in One Car

Far beyond the territory of flashy streamliners, many secondary runs were modernized overnight with the arrival of a Budd Rail Diesel Car (RDC). The lightweight stainless steel cars featured onboard diesel drives and could be run alone or coupled together as traffic demanded, and run by a single engineer.

The Versatile Boxcar

Handle all kinds of cargo with boxcars from WalthersProto® & WalthersMainline®. For freight that needs protection from the elements, a boxcar is ideal. Boxcars carry almost any type of load from baggage and mail on passenger runs to paper products and appliances on freight trains. Boxcars were even used to carry troops during the war.

Boxcars come in many configurations. Double doors allow for more convenient loading while insulated cars handle products that need temperature control during shipping. Waffle sides add extra strength and support load restraints inside the car. Although declining in numbers due to specialized car designs and the introduction of containers, boxcars are still in daily use on the railroad. Because of their versatility, you'll want to have plenty of them in your yard.

Bridge Building Made Easy

Inexpensive and easy to build, metal truss bridges were very popular in the late 19th and early 20th century. Various styles were developed, including the pony truss, which has no overhead supports. A variety of patented designs were sold by agents across the country and many of the bridges are still in use today.

Walthers exquisitely detailed model is based on a Santa Fe prototype similar to bridges found on many railroads. Made of sturdy architectural-grade board, the bridge is tough and durable enough to hold two locomotives. Features include raised rivets, scale gussets and cross braces plus other fine details. Laser-cut for easy assembly, this limited edition kit comes with glue included, so all you have to do is open the package and start building.
